

INSTITUTE OF CORPORATE RESPONSIBILITY AND SUSTAINABILITY

Organisational Principles of Membership

Organisational members of the ICRS are expected to comply with the following principles:

- Uphold and promote the reputation of the ICRS
- Actively participate in the activities of the ICRS and help to develop its reach and influence
- Develop understanding of the opportunities, risks and benefits that a commitment to corporate responsibility and sustainability can have for business, other organisations and society
- Create ways of working with stakeholders and partners within and across organisations to maximise the benefits of responsible and sustainable business practices
- Influence and persuade others of the case for corporate responsibility and sustainability
- Demonstrate integrity, honesty and ethical and appropriate behaviour at all times
- Act always within the law, contractual obligations and regulations
- Refrain from using membership of the ICRS to secure direct financial benefits from other members
- Respect and abide by these principles and encourage others to do the same

The Board reserves the right to suspend the membership of any organisation if it fails to comply with any of the above.
